

The Hospital

200 patients attend daily without appointments.

An ophthalmologist has made sight-restoring surgery possible.

Over 100 cataract operations were performed free of charge, for the first time, in December 2024.

Dr Rowland Cowley OBE, a retired British ophthalmologist, was the inspiration behind the Anglican Eye Clinic. He shared his vision to help Ghanaians suffering sight-loss due to avoidable and preventable eye disease.

Dr Cowley with Richard

In Ghana, poverty and limited eye care facilities are an enormous challenge.

Eye health care professionals, of any discipline, are invited to consider short term visits.

ANGLICAN EYE HOSPITAL JACHIE GHANA

Opened in 2002 by Sr Aba, the Anglican Eye Clinic was upgraded in 2019 to become the first stand-alone Mission Eye Hospital in Ghana. The Clinic and Hospital have improved life for many people.

Richard was born blind and first came to the Clinic at barely one month old.

Here he is at five years old and on his way to the School for the Blind in Akropong

Dinah, born blind, is from a different region in Ghana and was brought by her parents.

Sr Aba was able to enrol her at the School for the Blind

Dinah, seen here at eight years old, takes good care of Richard at the School where he is thriving, physically and educationally.

Dinah is also doing well at the School.

Blind children from various local villages are supported in their education by the Clinic - paying school fees, buying uniforms, providing food and sundries, and taking care of their medical needs.

Sr Aba with David and Nana – both blind.

Nana attended the School for the Blind for 7 years. She is pictured here at mainstream Senior High School

Nana is now a qualified teacher at a school for sighted pupils.

Eben, blind from birth, who at 4 years old was the first blind boy that Sr Aba supported.

Eben has completed a PhD at Oxford University, UK, and is now considering his future.
